“The sons of Iapetus represent four basic qualities of the human character, together with the suffering which comes with them. Atlas, the patient, has to bear and endure. Menoetius, the brave, is overpowered and hurled to destruction. Prometheus, the wise and prudent, is bound, i.e., his effectiveness is limited and a vulture i.e., care, gnaws at his heart. Epimetheus, the rash and thoughtless, is punished by his own folly.”
